

Where to begin in the sea of pant trends? by visuallyappealingllc featuring T Tahari

So, here is a little break down of three pant cuts and how they fit. Hopefully, this can get you started on finding the fit that works best for your body type, while still being fashionable and fun!

Cropped pants:

These look best on women when they hit at the thinnest part of the ankle (remember these are NOT capris!).

To elongate the leg, pair cropped pants with heels that show the top of the foot.

What I love most about this cropped trend is how versatile it can be. Anything from jeans to corduroys to wool slacks can be worn cropped.

For example, the pants at #2 in the picture are a perfect transitional piece from spring to summer, and from summer to fall. They are a lightweight, straight trouser that can immediately dress up any outfit. Pair them with a loose OR fitted blouse and you are good to go! – Whether it's to the office or out to dinner with friends.

The crops at #5 are more casual and fitted. These would work great for a petite body type. Also, since they have this velvet/corduroy texture to them, they are a great piece for fall and winter. Pair these with a tight top if you want to accentuate the high waist on the pants, or a loose blouse for some added comfort.

Lastly, #6: a perfect pant for work. They have a tweed look to them, for added texture, which also makes them great for fall and winter. The designer of these pants is BOSS, who is known for impeccably tailored pieces. If you want to add a timeless piece to your wardrobe, these pants are the way to go.

Bootcut Pants:

The bootcut pant is known to be the most flattering pant for all body types because the slight flair at the bottom aligns with the width of your waist, completely balancing out your bottom half.

The wide bottom also allows you to pair bootcut pants with almost any shoe. For the fall, bootcut look great with a heeled bootie or pump for a little-added height.

For all of these reasons, #3 on my pants' set is my favorite. This pant is by designer Ellen Tracy and is made to stretch.

Their heather grey color allows you to pair the pants with almost any color, from neutrals like black or charcoal to bright colors like pink or blue!

Wide Leg:

Wide leg pants almost ALWAYS have to be paired with a fitted top to balance out the top and bottom of your outfit. They are great for days when you want a little extra comfort. Not to mention, having extra room in your pant legs will keep you cool on those unexpectedly hot South Carolina days.

#1 and #4 are both pants with a wide leg fit. If you are looking for lots of comfort, #1 is the pant you need. These pants are by NYDJ (Not Your Daughter’s Jeans) and are known for their flattering fit around the waist because they don’t have buttons or zippers, so the front lays completely flat under any shirt. This pair even has a little extra stretch in the fabric. So, NYJD has basically provided us with pants that look like work slacks but FEEL like yoga pants. You may never want to take them off!

With all that said, which pant is best for you? Click the pant of your choice from the set of 6 images and start shopping!
